Any craft enthusiast is aware that there are numerous craft and scrapbooking gadgets claiming to be the all-in-one craft utility and resource. Of course, with all of the craft and scrapbooking products available it is crucial to examine each craft device in order to determine if they will prove to be a welcome addition to craftwork activities. In choosing a craft cutting device it is imperative to do some research on the machine provider as a good standing with consumers will equate to a positive purchase experience. If an individual ends up buying a craft and scrapbooking machine which is accompanied with poor customer service or refund policies then a purchase decision which should be a "sure bet" soon becomes an unsure gamble.

As of this writing, there are two craft cutting machines which appear to be the talk of craft and scrapbooking communities. These machines are the Provo Craft Cricut Expression machine and the Xyron Wishblade machine. Both of these machines offer computerized and automated cutting abilities but the Cricut Expression is able to work completely independent of a computer- unlike the Wishblade. The ability to have a craft and scrapbooking machine which is self-sufficient provides its owner with a portable craft and scrapbooking solution. It is a definite asset when one does not need to be tethered to a specific location due to computer presence or need to worry about computer compatibility or setup issues. With the Provo Craft Cricut Expression machine you just literally plug it in and you are set to go. Of course, if a person is "computer savvy" and have a craft room which is already equipped with a computer then this will not be an issue.

In regards to consumer ratings, both companies appear to have a good standing with the Better Business Bureau. Although, as of this writing, Provocraft has an A rating and Xyron possesses a B rating with the BBB- giving the Provocraft company a small lead in consumer satisfaction. With that said, both companies have a vast arsenal of resources and will definitely enable their users to evolve with each emerging trend.
